CROSS Current

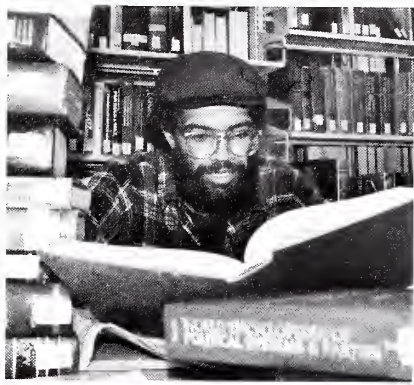

Cross — a symbol of the crucifixion of Jesus Christ, and hence of the Christian faith.

Current — in progress, contemporary of recent date.

Cross Current — a current flowing at an angle to the main current; an opposing opinion, influence, or tendency.

In the world to come, Unity without diversity is bliss; in this world (a fallen world) Unity without diversity is monotony. And dangerous. Let us look truly forward in our learning, to Him in all its facets. May our whole education may truly be Design for Life.

Colorado Christian College reflects upon itself.

*"A learning institution dedicated to development of the whole person. Unified as an individual. Corporate within a body. We try, we fail, we learn, we try, we succeed, we learn.
Of history, of science, of art, of literature, of life . . . we learn.
These are the many parts that are the one, that one is another of many parts which together are the whole."*

COLORADO CHRISTIAN COLLEGE!

Potentially a disaster, the merger of Rockmont and Western Bible College proceeded with great success. Fall enrollment reached 360, 170 of which were new students.
Dr. Wall, former Western President, took over the leadership for the new college. There was no Western Bible College library, arts, or other facilities with all classes focusing on Biblical principles.

One of the unique features of Colorado Christian College is the blending of various denominations. This provides a potential for an atmosphere which is diverse in traditions but united in essentials.
Even amongst the faculty there is a positive aspect of the college, for it provides growth and understanding for new ideas.

BIBLICAL STUDIES

In the beginning of Colorado Christian College there was Professor Ames, and he said 'Let there be a Biblical Studies Program.' With God on his side it was done and it was good.

Thus the concept was brought to reality. Students developing techniques in expository preaching, instructional directions in the Bible, and the ability to gain skills in communications, as well as proficiency in Greek and Hebrew.

Through the enlightenment of these aspects the invaluable theological tools bring the entire Biblical Studies program together to form a more strengthened outlook and understanding to the doctrines of Christian Theology.

Thru diligent studying and meditation some students are able to achieve double majors.

Frank Ames brings a sound basis to the Biblical Studies department.

Dave Diggs puts a great deal of time and effort into his studies which makes him highly regarded by others.

Dr. Beckman (Chancellor of Colorado Christian College) also teaches some Biblical Literature courses.

"For thou wilt light my candle: the Lord my God will enlighten my darkness." Psalms 18:28

CHRISTIAN MINISTRIES

On any given day, classes for Youth Ministry majors discuss questions and situations, which prepare them to counsel in a variety of settings. Headed by R. J. Koerper, the program helps to give the student a range of communications skills to better help others once they leave CCC. For in our world there is a strong craving for Christian witnesses: ears to listen, hearts to care, and a strong will to lift it to its feet when life drags it down.

▲ Oh, No! Decisions, decisions . . . (Take the J.T., R.J.)

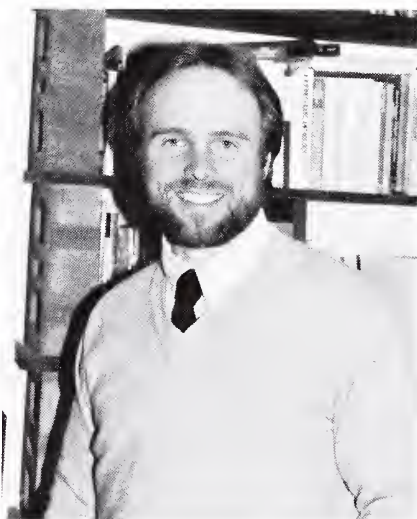

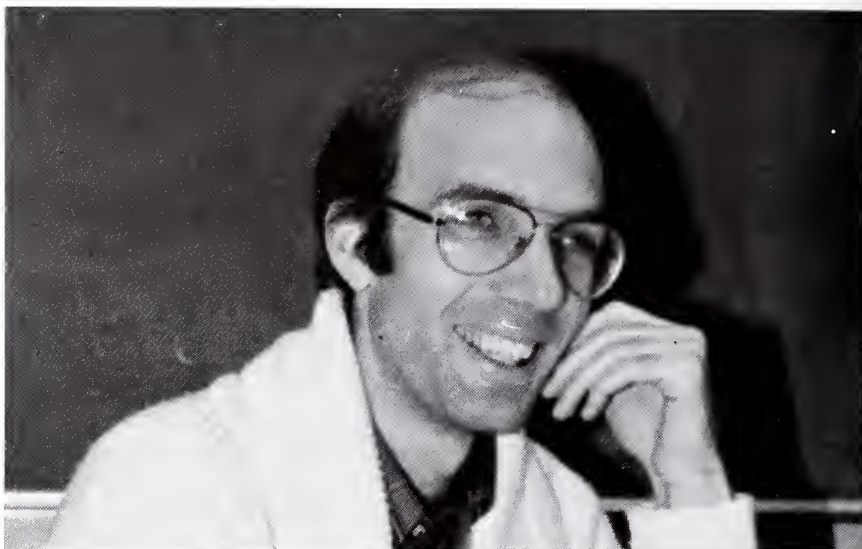

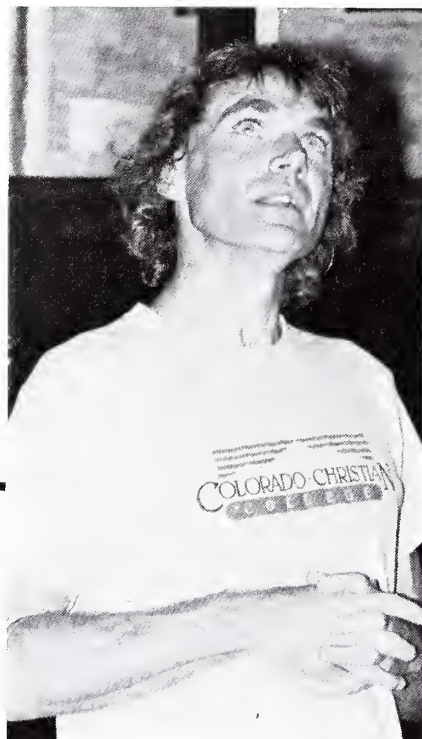

▲ Lorenda Madden studies her Bible from the balcony of her CCC apartment.

▲ Students often gather for sessions outdoors when Colorado's erotic weather permits.

▲ Youth Min. Major, Jeff Swisshelm, jams to the stereo on a drumset that fills most of his bedroom.

▲ R. J. Koerper looking casually unshaven heads up CCC's Christian Ministries Department.

THINKERS

As Rodin sculpted the 'Thinker' so do the triad of the humanities department sculpt our minds. These three men outwardly might look as if their whole lives revolve around thinking philosophically, but they enthrall more.

Despite personal interests in pierced ears, "The Dead Kennedy's" and uncombed hair, one can find them around campus encouraging, directing, and living the lives they teach.

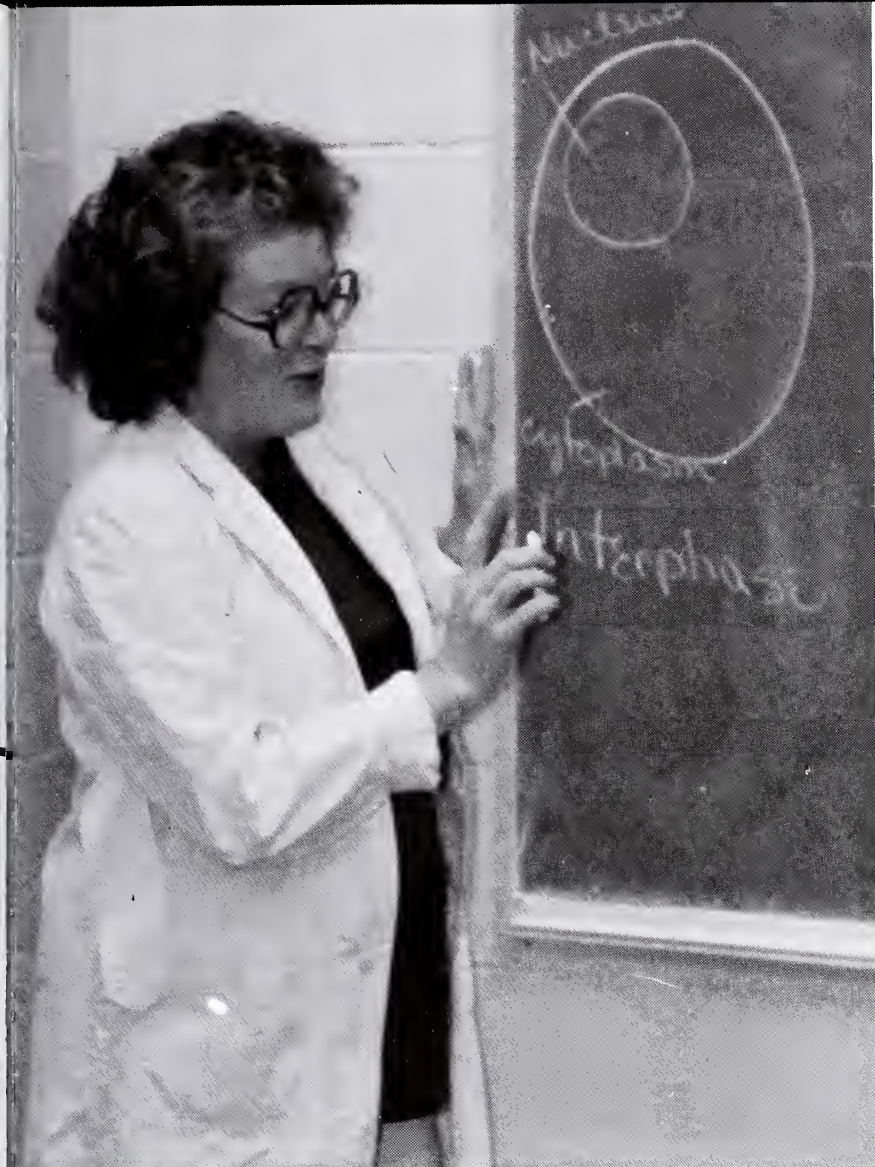

When not teaching, Rick Scheideman spends time pursuing his theatre talents with the school productions and as a member of Alpha Psi.

Teacher, Mentor, Friend: Wayne Bornholdt blends a unique dimension into the philosophy department (despite our FALLEN WORLD).

Elsie Fick's warm smile adds a friendly dimension to the language and literature side of the Humanities department.

With a private practice in the making, Don Koehler still finds time to teach a Biblically intriguing approach to Psychology.

Calvin's Geneva?

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS?

Christian Scientists have been spotted on campus! It's been reported that they collected in the lower levels of the learning center participating in such things as biological investigations and chemical potions or conversations on any topic, from the weather to personal problems.

We were able to capture some of them on film and we present them before you, to view for yourself the impressive work behind the CCC science department.

With her unique teaching skills she tells her students, all about life.

All dressed up and already gone.

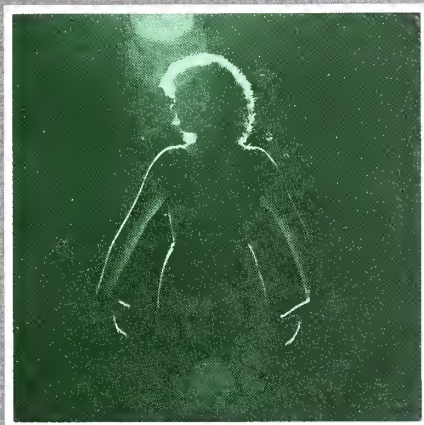

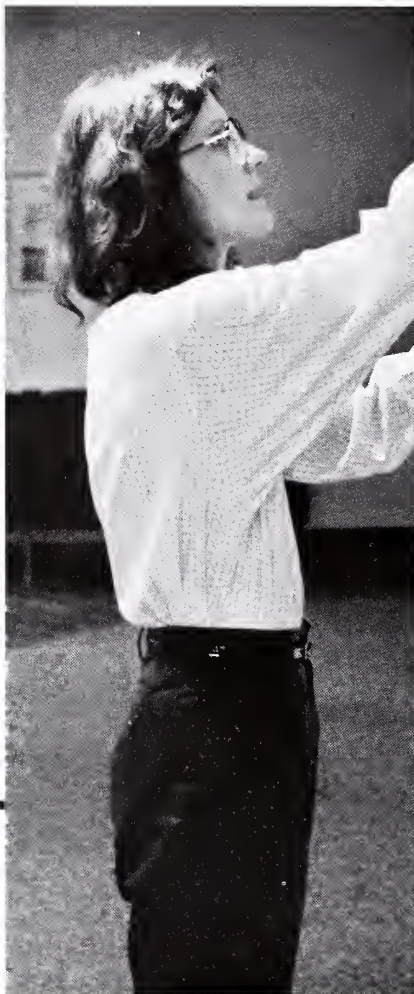

So that's what's in CCC water!!!

"Those things which are experienced at the point of transcending even themselves. Expressions of this temporal and finite life, which reach for the fuller meaning far beyond our grasp: in music, in art, in theatre, in dance. These which upon reflection have cleared away just a portion of that darkened orb within which we starve for truth." ▲

STAGE LEFT

Perfectionist, Artist, Professional, Enthusiast; all these words are synonymous with Teresa Choate. A past Rockmont professor, we were blessed this year to have her included in the CCC staff. With her expertise in the area of stage, we were able to witness superb examples of her directive genius and many entertaining productions. Her students were able to master the art behind 'true professional theatre' as Teresa established a new and solid foundation for our drama department.

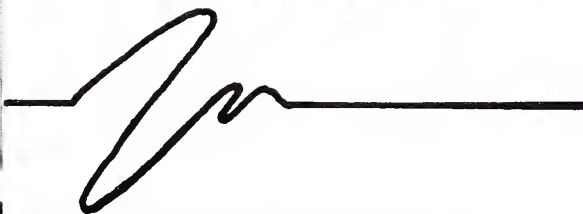

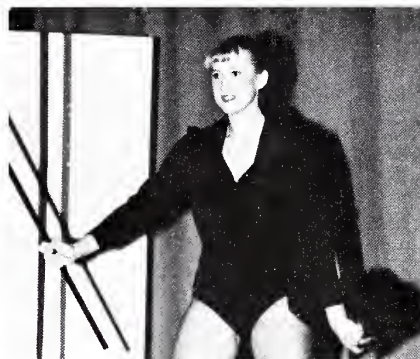

"Look: Up in the sky . . ."

*Teresa with a rare appearance ON the stage.
"Ah, yes we remember it well."*

"You think it's bad now it's only going to get sillier."

Though always on the go, Teresa still finds time to share with others.

RAGTIME

Take a variety of people, with a variety of talents and an overwhelming amount of enthusiasm — blend all these properties together and you have this year's RIP ROARIN' RAGTIME REVIEW.

A production which included such acts as a Hawaiian Dance, a 1920 dance interpretation, a tricycle version of "Leader of the Pack," and even a special appearance by everyone's favorite clown, Dave Diggs . . . (sorry make that Pee-Wee Herman.) All in all, the night was a success, for fun was had by all . . .

That's funny — sorority girls always used to laugh when I did that. (Paul Teichert)

It's poultry in motion. (Marianne Barr, Dorothy Liesch)

You want me to do it again !! (Tamara Bugno)

Wanna hear a song about Jowls? (Cindy Troup, Karen Troup, Carol Ferguson)

I know you're a heretic but what am I!!!! (Dave Diggs)

FALL

This year's Fall Production, "Royal Gambit," brought a fascinating new twist to the life of Henry Tudor. We saw the progression of man through time, moving away from God, and towards his own personal discovery.

Each of Henry's six wives represented an important aspect to the progression of Western thought: Katrina of Aragon represented religious faith and its development; Anne Boleyn, the age of reason in the late Renaissance. Jane Seymour represented Romanticism in the early 19th century, Anna of Cleves, materialism in the late 19th and 20th centuries. Finally, Kathryn Howard, represented the concept of personal freedom in the 20th century, and Kate Parr, the knowledge of modern age.

Directed by our own Teresa Choate, and brought together by a gifted group of performers and crew, the stage was set for an outstanding year in drama.

His loving first wife, Katrina, reminds Henry not to isolate himself from God. (Laurie MacKinnon and Rick Scheideman)

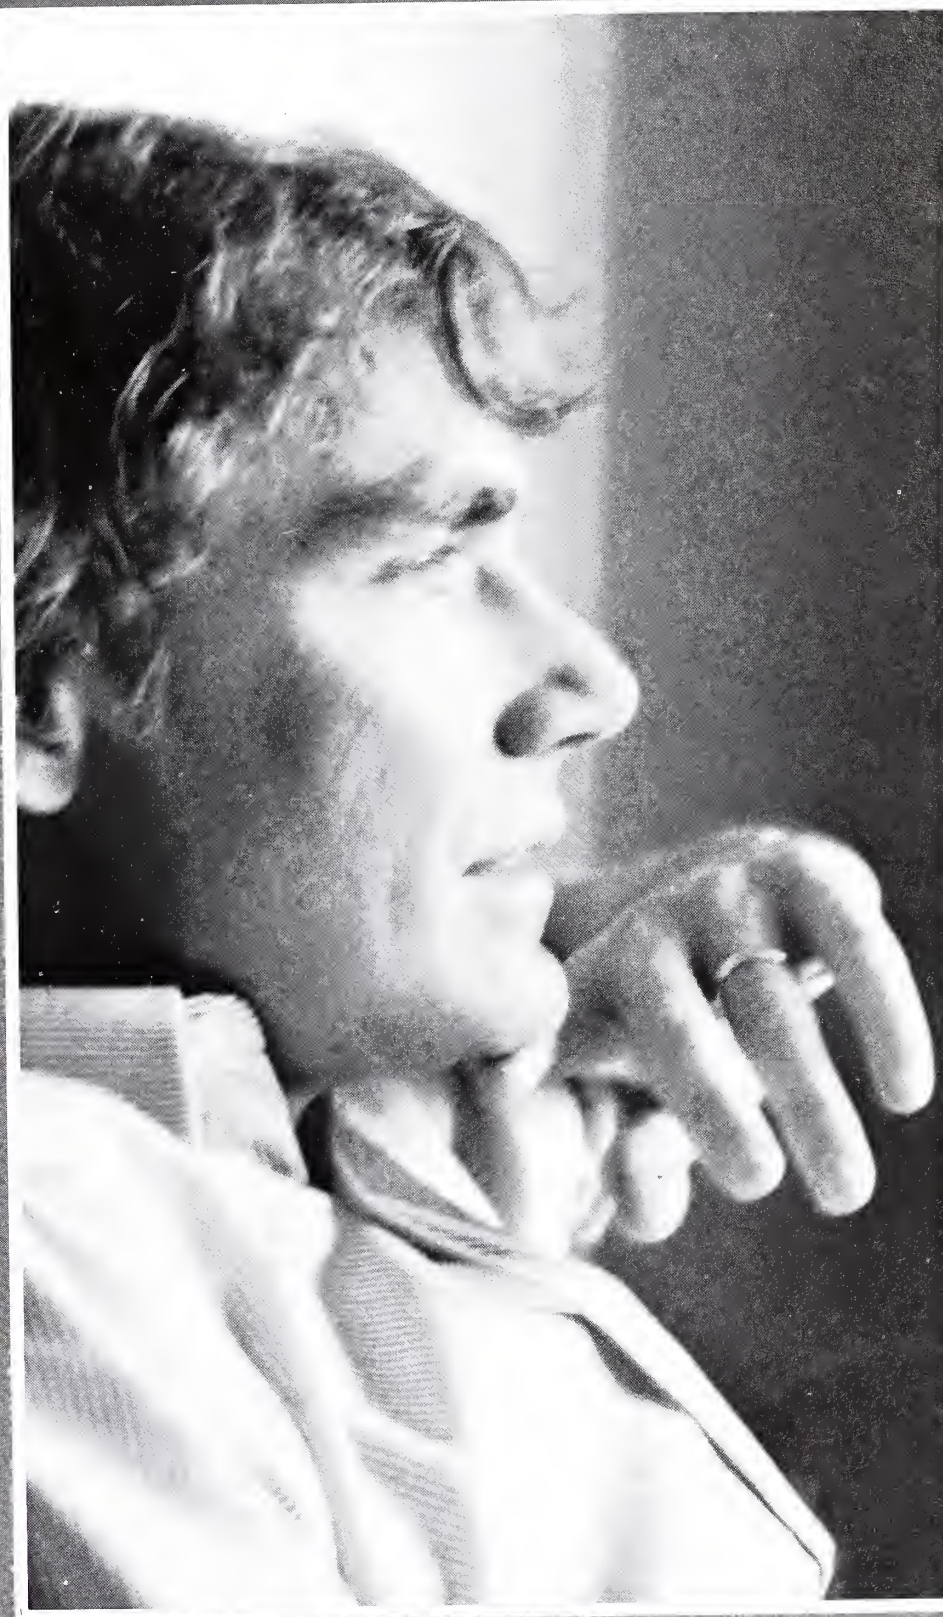

A discerning Henry Tudor contemplates the future of modern man. (Rick Scheideman)

CROSSFIRE, a high energy Christian rock band represented CCC in a Junior-Senior High school setting the members of the band included: David Quinn, rhythm guitar; Rob Curry, lead guitar; Jonathan Hatch, drums, percussions; Frank Lans, bass guitar; Dan Rust, keyboards; Dan McCabe, lead and back-up vocals; Chris Bell, lead and back-up vocals; Angelia DeHerrera, lead and back-up vocals, and back-up keyboards; Pam Hadden, sound; and Rick Mezey, director.

The band originated at Western, when the colleges merged, the band did too, gaining many new members. CROSSFIRE's ministry was basically evangelistic, and the repertoire of songs with lyrics that are vividly related to many problems kids experience out in the world today.

"Beyond our core of education lie those parts of experience which bond our many into one. This is learning and growth for which there is no classroom, direction and purpose which demand only the person. Lessons of love, lessons of life, about which there can be no question. Through these is found the total being through which all other learning is made prosperous and purposeful."

ASSOCIATIONS

Colorado Christian College's Choir

Ensemble

CHOIR

The campus was alive with the sounds of music, all coming from the harmonious band of songsters, known as the Colorado Christian College Choir. Headed by director Burns, this devoted group practiced twice a week, for an hour and a half. Performing such works as, Handel's Messiah, and The Hallelujah Chorus for a number of social and church groups. In the area the choir gained a powerful reputation for excellence and professionalism.

The choir ended its season in May, with a tour of the West Coast. Giving Colorado Christian College a reputation that preceded more than just the local community.

ALPHA PSI

CCC is home to the Omicron Sigma cast of Alpha Psi Omega. Alpha Psi is a national honorary drama fraternity dedicated to the promotion and improvement of the students at CCC by educating and participating in the school's production. The fraternity's members raise funds for CCC's drama budget. This year's fund raisers were ragtime review, one act, act-a-grams, and the talent show. Alpha Psi also hosted the annual awards banquet. The members of Alpha Psi earn entrance by accumulating points through participation in the theatre and then they go through an induction ceremony that is kept secret, like their constitution, by orders of the national fraternity.

Something new came to Colorado Christian this year; the Karar Dance Company. The name Karar is the Hebrew word used for dance in II Samuel 6:14, where "David danced before the Lord with all his might."

In selecting types of music and dance for the performances, MacKinnon felt there should be variety and quality. She did a great deal of research on the historical Hebrew worship dances to perform them in the Karar Dance Company. Her goal, to see the dance company develop as a way to glorify God.

With a purpose of providing a chance for play in the wide world of rivers, mountains, and prairies, as opposed to the small world of desk, pencil, and paper, the Outdoor Fanatics Club has lured a mob of fifty-plus hikers, cross-country skiers, repellers, rafters, and spelunkers. But just getting organized this year, their fanaticism has only been witnessed in one backpacking trip to Glen Eyrie, and scheduled for Montana. The future wish is for four to five of these plunges into fun per semester. Outdoor fanatics has no dues and no officers but their head organizers are Carol Ferguson, Mary Beth Alsager, and R. J. Koerper.

MISSIONS
GROUP
THURSDAY 9:25-9:55
ROOM 109
EVERYONE WELCOME

S•M•F

Every Thursday morning at 9:25, you were sure to find someone praying in room 109, once a small group this club grew significantly. It's called the Student Missionary Fellowship of Colorado Christian College, and it has a heart for missions.

Originally started as a small informal group by some former members of the student Missions Impact of Western Bible College, the group expanded both in membership and scope. Now consisting of former Rockmont and Western students as well as students from other schools.

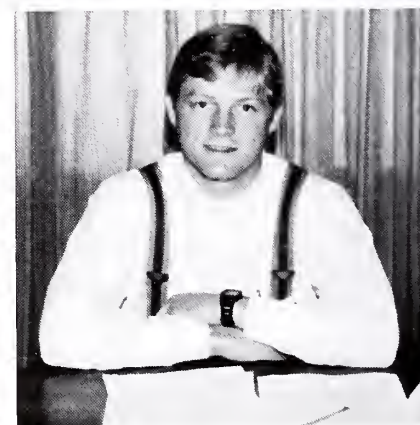

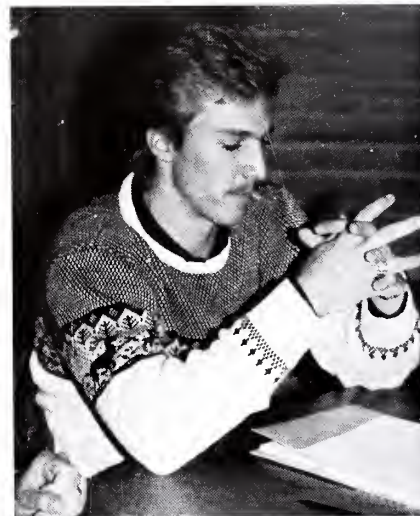

Missions Club, an important aspect of CCC.

"I move to do this . . .", "I move we do that . . ." These words could be heard coming from around the table of the faculty lounge as the Student Representatives met to help in guidance of the school.

It was a year of confusion but high energy for Student Council as well as the entire school. As one body, the group faced the difficult issues of fee structure and constitution changes to the lighter decision like what move would be appropriate for Friday movie nights.

Student Government hoped that they would be a group that could be approached when feelings need to be voiced and policies changed.

Never a dull moment in Student Council . . . right guys?

CHRONICLE

Someone wise once said, "The greatest ability one can have is dependability." Colorado Christian College's first newspaper, the Chronicle, was a success this year because there were dependable people who contributed to make it work. For a college does not cater to persons pursuing a career in journalism, I was astonished at the journalistically talented group of students who helped out this year.

Without Dave Diggs' ability to analyze issues critically and efficiently; Wes Fothergill's resourcefulness and interest in current events; Bob Bulkley's faithful capacity to serve, unify, and plan; Susan Adam's extraordinary writing ability and woman's perspective; Sandie Weeks' knack for conversation and willingness to learn; Ken Boesch's subjective view of the world of sports; Holden Hume's creative imagination and artistic ability; Mary Rosenberg's and Corina Arndt's "Ces Deux Amis;" Tim Matykiewicz's management skills; and the best photographer any college-level publication could have, Joe Brown — the CCC Chronicle would border on mere mediocrity. These students are capable and dependable enough to pursue and succeed at any career they may choose!

Because of these and many more dependable writers and contributors, the Chronicle's first year was informative, attractive, and looked forward to by the CCC community.

As the editor, I've learned some valuable lessons. First, an editor has a huge responsibility to be true, objective, and willing to learn from mistakes while being the 'gatekeeper' for a publication. While you can't please everyone all of the time, "the power of the printed page" can have a huge impact on its public. Herein lies the responsibility of the CCC Chronicle.

"People and places rush by the vast walls of your memory, each attached to the recollection of thoughts and of feelings, each of which retains properties and values of its own for which there can be no replacement. All of these are the substance from which is made the thought life of the contemplative thinker. For without these relationships, there is no connection between life and living." ▲

STAIRWELLS

They're a time of worship and prayer, a time of fellowship and fun. A place to express your needs, voice your opinions, and share a joke. These are the basic elements brought forth in stairwell meetings.

This year included a variety of unique and qualified leaders to head up the stairwells. Dave Diggs brought together Kendall Rames, Helena Gerstenberg, Juanita Perkins, Dorothy Leisch, Bobbi Jo Banks, Tom Gannon, Dave Matthewson, and Ray Brown to work as RA's.

This year we had people "In Search of the White Bunnies," living in "The Ghetto," and people living in fear of some strange character who went by the pen name Norman. All in all in spite of the lunacy, we found a great deal of fellowship.

Things varying from a candle-lighting ceremony, to congratulate newly engaged students to a lip sinc contest sponsored by "The Ghetto." We learned the problems and warning signs that are associated with eating disorders and the importance of trusting God in all relationships. Of course the basic element of all these stairwell meetings were the deveopment of friendships and the unity of a variety of people that is sure to last a lifetime.

RA'S

Too often, they're forgotten, the men and women who make this campus home. They're moms and dads, in charge of discipline, but more often, sisters and brothers. People who you feel comfortable with to share dreams, and tears. They bring support and fellowship to a world where, too often you can lose touch with yourself. They're the RA's, people who give of themselves and seldom notice the true admiration and appreciation we have for them. What better time then now to show thanks for a successful year: Tom, Dorothy, Juanita, Helena, Ray, Dave M., Dave D., and Kendall ... you are appreciated!

Can you believe this man was in charge?

Love the job a lot don't you Juanita?

Nice face Kendall

Ray, laid back and cool as ever.

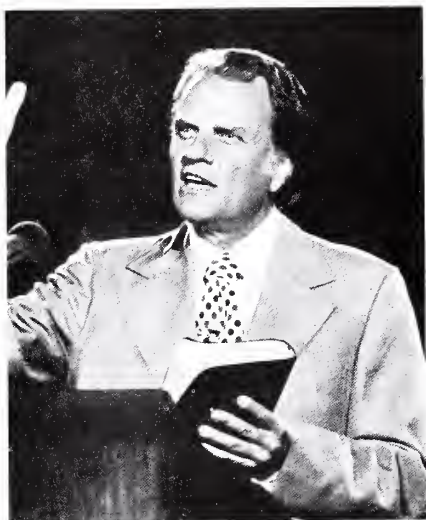

"I can't believe I forgot my Polo!"

Bobbi-Jo all smiles as usual.

Chapels at CCC, are an important part of life. They help to strengthen the Spiritual awareness of the students by providing exposure to several perspectives come from professors, students who lead worship, special guests from the community, missions representatives, as well as the various performing groups associated with the school.

The chapels also provide an opportunity for the entire school to worship together as a family. This helps the community as the students pray for each other and encourage one another.

CCC hopes to promote a complete development of the students who attend and participate.

OUT & ABOUT

From the Pearl Street Mall in Boulder, to the newly remodeled Village Inn, to Wendy's, to Pizza Hut; From the thriving megaopolis that is Denver, (See opposing page. Now, that's what I call a megaopolis!) to the placid lakes and parks of the surrounding Foothills; the active and imaginative CCC student had much to choose from. An article in the CCC Chronicle even suggested that students this year spent more hours at the Village Inn than they did in the school's library (sorry, Jerry). Tuesday Night Dollar Movies became such a tradition first semester as to warrant a film review column in the Chronicle. From Red Rocks to the Rainbow Music Hall, to the Denver Center for the Performing Arts, to our own Teresa Choate and her CCC Drama Department, To Broncos, to Nuggets, to CCC Cougars, life at Colorado Christian College was as eventful as the individual cared to make it.

Each competition aimed within, to do as well as one can, and then to do it better. The body directed by the mind and the mind propelled by the body, all as the unity of power and poise which is the athlete."

FOOTBALL

CCC's flag football team ended its season as they lost in the first round of the play-offs. 51-35, to an explosive Missions Hills squad, it was the fourth loss of the year for CCC, three of which came out of the hands of Missions Hills. Quarterback Steve Keough, felt the team peaked during the middle of the season. Whatever the outcome of the season we thank the team for a number of fun-filled Saturdays.

"Cougars, Cougars, Cougars!" The crowd went crazy this year for the men's basketball team. Coached by Todd Lansing, the team represented CCC in a most honorably fashion. Sportsmanship both on and off the court, brought the team as well as the fans even closer together.

Early morning practices made the Cougars hard to beat, yet taking on a tough competition such as Mines and UNSTA, they were able to come up on top.

With basically a senior line up, we saw a great deal of style and technique, that was even able to rub off on the newer players.

The men's basketball team was able to bring a strong sense of school spirit and encouragement to this newly formed institution. This first team will long time be remembered not only for their wins on the court, but the positive influence they had on all of us!

BASKETBALL

learning the game, there has developed a sort of bond between the players, a comradery that has stretched beyond the basketball court into "real life." Each Sunday night the team, with the coach, rises to the challenge of putting its teamwork and sportsmanship into action, and behind them all the way is a fan club that not only knows how to yell, but also knows how to dress (Hawaiian style). How many teams can boast that?

Bzzzz! At 5:30 in the morning one does not want to hear that sound, especially when it means one must rise to run suicides. Nevertheless, the first Colorado Christian College girls' basketball team drags itself out of bed twice a week to face the torture. It's not all that bad, however. This team has come a long way in its first season, considering we started with "This is a ball, that is a basket — put the ball in the basket." In addition to

"Dave, Dave, Doctor Dave!!"

Wendy awesome on offense!

"Look Mom, no feet!"

SKI

Whether you were just learning how to stand up or attempting moguls, the ski club was for you. With Dave you could learn how to snow plow, hey no more sitting down to stop for me! Now you were ready to hit the slopes, although you needed to know how to turn. Going straight down the hill was not recommended, unless you're ready for racing. Now beginners go down the hill pretty funny (although they deserve a lot of credit for trying). They usually ski, or should I say snow plow the whole way down. Hey, they just learned this new technique and they're not going to let it go to waste!

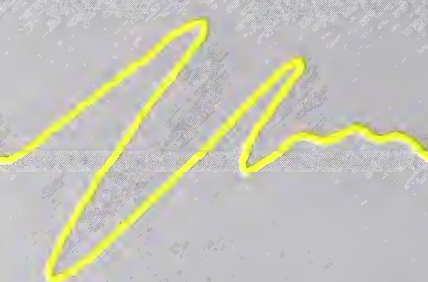

At the top of the mountain the view is awesome. God never seems to stop amazing you. So now you've looked the whole situation over, double checked the trail map. Make sure the goggles are on and go! After a while you begin to notice that you're snow plowing less and your skis are getting closer together. You feel hot now. After a few more times of skiing, you're paralleling! The skis and your body are under control. Now you're not falling anymore, except when those 8 year-olds get in the way. You love that exhilarating feeling of skiing, like eating a York peppermint patty.

Ready for moguls? Why not! Skiing around those little hills takes skill and strength, but it can be conquered. Skiing with ski club was a great learning experience and lots of fun.

John

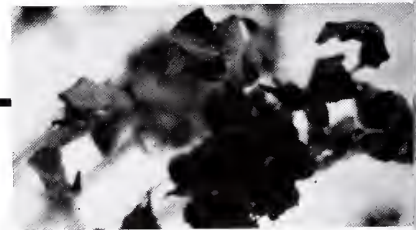

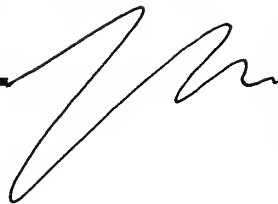

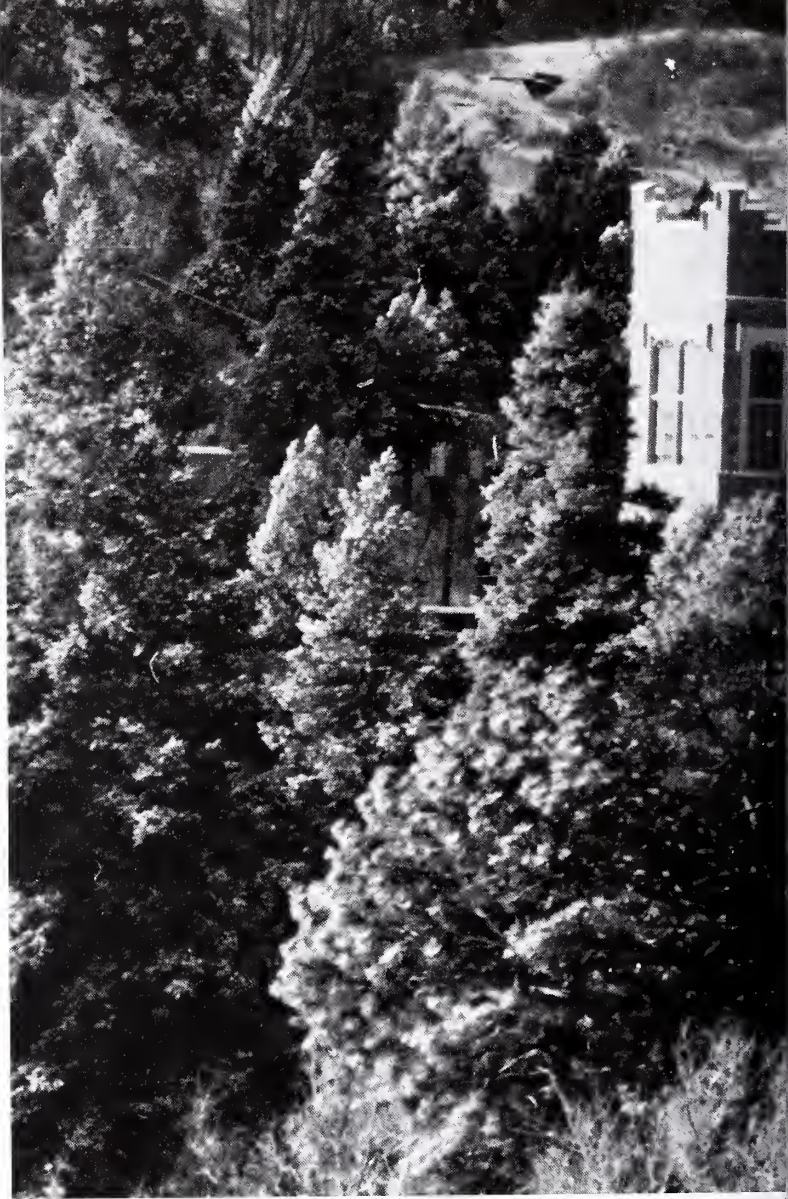

"A shared experience with shared purpose and individual language is found in every form of life's expression, one which is transferable only within its perimeter of member. Within these diverse pursuits is found the common trait of understanding through participation. Only with this common apprehension, may interests be shared."

A C C E N T S

The two-day retreat, which began with breakfast here, and then carpooling together to Glen Eyrie, had its established purpose "to focus upon our Father and our Lord Jesus Christ through the integration of music (Roger Cooper) and oral interpretation (John Holland)." It was a time to consider seriously our relationship with God and respond to His voice, build closer relationships with others in the community, relax, be refreshed, and forget school work!

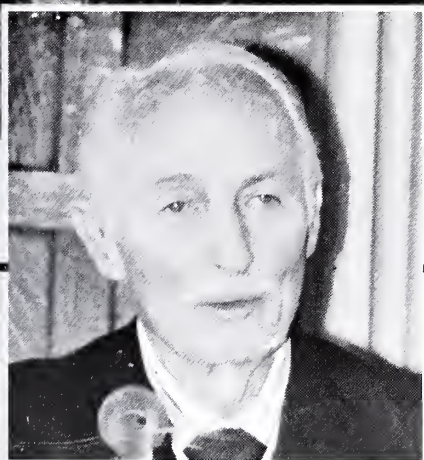

Beyond the words of Holland and the music of Cooper, a variety of activities were planned. These included team competition in a show sculpture tournament, a paper airplane toss, biblical theme picture poses, frisbee long-distance pitch, a hike up the trail to the waterfall, and a tour of the historic Glen Eyrie castle.

Activities were available for all to participate in.

Roger Cooper contributed to the fun with his music.

Festival '85, a concept brought forth and achieved by Jeff Pluth, and a dedicated staff, was probably the highlight of the year. A beautiful fall day brought us a fun filled afternoon of music, games, shows, and food. From wandering mimes and unicycling clowns to a record ride of ten seconds on the log roll, members of the college community and local Christian community shared in a variety of outdoor activities.

Perhaps more importantly, though was the pervading sense of unity and friendship which filtered from both the players and the participants of this year's Festival.

As the sun eased down on the picture perfect day, a patchwork quilt of cloud cover enfolded the crowd for an evening of contemporary Christian music by Roger Cooper, and Brian Duncan. Anything but stale, the communion between artists and audience kept the CCC campus rockin', rollin', boogeyin', and shankin' till four minutes past ten o'clock. Only the expiration of the city noise permit was responsible for the seemingly early benediction, appropriately closing in prayer a day in the Son ... and an evening of unity.

Friendly CCC students welcome Festival visitors.

*What does man gain from all his labor
at which he toils under the sun?
Generations come and generations go,
but the earth remains forever.
The sun rises and the sun sets,

there is nothing new under the
